Synopsis

A fairytale about a stray Dog – a playboy in his past life now punished to live as a Dog. That is until he finds a girl who needs love and can get her to love him. Then he can get a chance to become a man again.

A lonely girl, Lisa, trying to find true love.

The Dog meets Lisa in the park one day; she takes him home and names him Prince.

In the beginning, the Prince is just trying to use her to become a man. Trying to win her love he interferes with her dates and fights off her drunken boss. Lisa pledges her true love for Prince - He becomes a man but only at night. In the Day he is still a dog

Prince becomes involved in her life. But Lisa also faces outside pressure from family and friends to find a man and get married. Increasingly, she can't stand that her lover is only a man half of the time.

Their life is complicated and both of them struggle. Eventually Prince can't take it any more; he leaves her and reverts to being a full-time Dog, again.

The Dog realizes, after all, that he, for the first time, is deeply in love with a woman, so he decides to go back to Lisa.

They see each other on the street and excitedly run to each other, The Dog gets hit by a car and dies. Lisa is very sad, but full of hope for Prince to be reborn and to come back to her as a full-time man, years pass by but nothing happens.

One day Prince returns as a young man. Lisa is very excited and asks why he came back so late. Prince says he waited until he grew up to be a man, so he can take of her.

When they kiss, Prince becomes an old man; Lisa realizes that for Prince to come back to her, he has to sacrifice his youth to match her age.

Finally the two old lovers have a wedding ceremony, during which they become young again . . .
